COCOANUTS FALL AT NIGHT

This Accounts For Small Loss of Life Among Natives

(Baker's Weekly)

In the tropics, where the cocoanut is wanted for planting, the nuts are picked up when they fall from the trees where they have hung for about 14 months in ripening. It is a fact not generally known that a majority of the nuts drop at night, which probably accounts for the small loss of life by cocoanuts falling upon the heads of the natives.

The action of the heavy dew at night loosens the seal with which nature has provided the nut and allows it to fall. The nuts wanted for planting are either gathered into heaps or placed under sheds, where they are allowed to sprout before planting, in order that good healthy "sprout nuts" may be selected, thus avoiding the possibility of planting "blind" nuts that would not sprout, in which case much time would be lost in sowing "cocoanut walks" as the orchards are called. When holes are dug about three feet deep and 20 feet apart the nut is carefully placed in the hole and covered with about one foot of soil. The hole is filled as the sprout grows until it reaches the surface, when it is left to itself, requiring no further attention. Should the place where the cocoanut is planted be any great distance from the seashore a quantity of salt is placed in the hole. It will grow in luxuriance, however, but a short distance from the shore, nearness to salt water being absolutely essential to its welfare.

An interesting story is told by a gentleman who resided for some years in the tropics. He planted a cocoanut tree behind a board fence some distance from the sea. The tree grew perfectly straight until it reached the top of the fence, when it began to grow toward the ocean, leaning a foot or more; then a shed was built, quite near the fence, but several feet higher and the tree again grew straight until the roof of the shed was reached, when it again leaned toward the sea, forming a very curious and odd-looking tree.

The irregular growth was wholly attributed to the influence of the salt air. No magnet is truer to the pole than the root of the cocoanut tree to the ocean, for when the root breaks through its husk it points directly toward the sea, no matter what the position of the nut when placed in the ground.

EXERCISE IN OLD AGE

(Medical Record)

Old age is the period when one finds a good many conflicting opinions, but the evidence appears to be in favor of regular exercise and plenty of it up to old age, especially if one has been active in early and middle life. H. Toeppen, in the New York Medical Journal, mentions a man in Holland who was 70 when he won a well-contested skating race. Also a man past 70 who came in ninth in a 350-mile race which occurred in France a couple of years ago. He sums up by stating that it is futile to try to lay down general age limits for the different kinds of athletic sports. One of the most remarkable feats for an aged man ever recorded is the great performance of Edward P. Weston, who at the age of 70 walked from New York to San Francisco in 105 days. One year prior to this he walked from Portland, Maine, to Chicago, averaging nearly 50 miles a day and covering 1,200 miles. Weston has been an athlete all his life, as in an interview with a reporter he said he exercises every day excepting Sunday. His habits have always been good and he is a strict temperance man.

The recent death of Prof. Lombroso at the age of 73 recalls to our minds that he was a famous bicyclist and frequently journeyed through Europe on his wheel.

The death, a short time ago, of Josa Radcliffe, recalls a wonderful feat which he performed at the age of 42. He backed himself to run, swim, row, ride a horse and a wheel each a quarter mile within a quarter of an hour. The times he made were: Rowing, 1:43; swimming, 5:39; fastening on shoes, 5:3; running, 1:53; cycling and riding horse together, 2:40; total time, 12:48.

Last year a pedestrian named Hughes, it is said, walked 50 miles in 10 hours. His age was stated to be 68.

In commenting on the death of William Blake, lawyer, athlete and author, a writer states that there was something sadly significant in his death at the age of 61. Mr. Blake, when young and in middle age was very much interested in athletics. As he grew older he devoted about all his time to his law practice, and it is said that he took no exercise the last year of his life. The strain caused by a very important law case is supposed to have paved the way for a fatal stroke of apoplexy. So interested was he in this case that he frequently worked far into the night on the papers. Here is another illustration of a man who did not keep up his heart muscle, as it is very evident that degenerate changes occurred promptly when he ceased taking his usual exercise, as he was a natural athlete up to his sixtieth year. When a young man he was a stroke oarsman in the Harvard crew which defeated Yale in the year 1866. When 17 years of age he lifted with his hands alone 1,019 pounds. Another feat was walking from Boston to New York (225 miles) in four and a half days.

All the best authorities appear to believe that walking is the best exercise of all provided it is done in the open air. Blake thinks walking may be prescribed as a therapeutic measure in certain conditions. Dr. Gaskell says: "A good, brisk walk in the fresh air, with free breathing and good style, is as useful a form of physical exercise as any I know."

Gas lighting has recently been boomed in Japan and ten new companies are to be floated.

CARUSO ON GETTING RICH

Enrico Caruso was laughing over the recent Black Hand attempt to extort $15,000 from him. "I like to see my fellow-countrymen make money," said the tenor. "I even like to see them make money quickly and easily. But I insist on their playing the game. They mustn't like a wit I know, break the rules of the game even in jest. This wit, in a bridge sitting at a club, led, contrary to all precedent, a small card. Yet this led turned out well. The wit won all the tricks. 'Well, my friend,' sneered one of his opponents, 'you won the game by that low lead. Yet there was no earthly reason why you should have made such a lead. And, therefore you won accidentally, even idiotically. Ha, ha!' I had a very good reason for leading the low card I did, the wit replied. 'Bosh! What was it?' his opponent demanded. 'We will have a bet,' said the wit. 'Supper for the party—champagne and little birds. Will you bet that I hadn't a good reason for my queer lead?' 'Yes, I take the bet,' was the reply. 'Now give me your reason.' 'Well,' said the wit, 'I saw your hand.'—New York Sun.

But at that, there are some barbers who use their razors in such a way that even six months' imprisonment wouldn't be adequate punishment.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans. — "A few days ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was soreness in my right side. In a short time a bunch came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away." — Mrs. R. R. Huey, 713 Mineral Ave., Galena, Kans.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.
